

Keio University Law School
Specialization Program in International Dispute Resolution

1. Overview

In order to contribute to globalization of the Japanese legal profession and specifically, the development of human resources in the area of international dispute resolution such as international arbitration, on February 25, 2019, Keio University Law School (“KLS”) qualified as a Recognized Course Provider (“RCP”) for the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators (“CIArb”), one of the world’s leading professional bodies for training of international dispute resolution professionals.

Accordingly, from April 2019, students in both the KLS J.D. and LL.M. programs who complete the KLS courses International Commercial Arbitration I can obtain a qualification as a CIArb Member.

Further, legal professionals who wish to be active in the field of international dispute resolution and to acquire related knowledge and skills may register at KLS as non-degree “subject” students to take international dispute resolution-related courses, centered on the above-referenced two subjects, as part of KLS’ “International Dispute Resolution Specialization Program” which is being established concurrently as one of KLS’ continuing legal education (CLE) programs. This CLE program is designed for working professionals, and so many of the courses offered in the program are held evenings or weekends to be compatible with work obligations.

3. Fees

Legal practitioners who take courses at KLS in this CLE program are classified as non-degree “subject” students (科目等履修生.)

The following fees are required to take courses at KLS as “subject” students:

Examination fee (for one year) * 18,000 yen /

Registration fee (1 semester) * 40,000 yen /

Tuition fee (per 1 credit) 37,000 yen

The total of tuition and other fees required to receive the KLS completion certificate is 320,000 yen for 6 credits taken over one academic year (2 semesters). If you were instead to take the required 6 credits for completion in one semester, the cost is 280,000 yen.

Note: Additional fees are charged directly by CIArb for Associate and Member qualification and continuing membership.

4. Application Procedures

Any lawyer or other legal practitioner or corporate legal staff member can, in principle, participate in the specialization program. However, please keep in mind that all classes and final exams are conducted in English, and participation in class discussion and training exercises is taken into account in the evaluation of grades so a fairly high level of comprehensive English proficiency is required. For details on the application procedure, please check:
